The Communist Manifesto, written in 1848 by Marx and Friedrich Engels, is a revolutionary call to action that has inspired generations of activists and scholars. It succinctly outlines the principles of Marxism, including the concept of class struggle, the inevitability of capitalist collapse, and the ultimate triumph of a communist society.

Wage Labour and Capital, published in 1849, explores the relationship between labor and capital under capitalism. Marx argues that workers are exploited by capitalists, who extract surplus value from their labor, leading to class conflict and the accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few.

Capital, Marx's magnum opus, is a three-volume analysis of the capitalist system published between 1867 and 1894. This monumental work delves into the intricacies of the capitalist mode of production, including the nature of value, the role of money and credit, and the tendency of capitalism towards crises and instability.

Key Features:

- Complete and unabridged texts of all three works
- Detailed and extensive annotations by renowned Marx scholars
- Appendices containing Marx's other writings and contemporary reactions to his ideas
- Chronological and thematic indexes for easy reference
